

Dear Danny Developer is written by Chuck Vigeant

Dear Danny Developer

As a software developer can you please explain to me just "how" the whole QuickBooks End User License thing works and what it really means?

Should Have Been a Lawyer.....

Dear Should Have Been a Lawyer,

The EULA specifically addresses... to wit: When a company owns a copy of QB it is for their use, not their accountants, if the product is being used in the furtherance of the business owners own business. A CPA who owns his/her own copy would be engaged in the furtherance of his businesses, i.e. servicing his client. This happenstance is specifically addressed in the 2005+ EULA paragraph 3 for "Single User" and paragraph 4 for "Multi-users".

Single User: If you purchased a full, single-user license of the Software, you are granted a limited non-exclusive license to use the enclosed Software on the computer(s) used by a single individual. You may make one (1) backup copy of the Software solely for the purpose of reinstalling the Software, if needed, on the computer(s) used by the same single individual. You may not copy the printed materials accompanying the Software, if any, or print multiple copies of any user documentation. Registration of the Software with Intuit after the approximate amount of time specified in the Software or in the materials accompanying the Software and in accordance with Intuit's then-current privacy policies is required.

Multi User: If you purchased a multi-user 5-Pack license or more than one license for a simultaneous user-capable version of the Software, you are granted a limited non-exclusive license to:

(i) use the enclosed Software on the number of computer(s) corresponding to the number of licenses you have purchased, up to five (5) computers and only where all such computers are owned and operated solely by and for your Company and used by up to a total of five (5) individuals who are your owners, employees or contractors;

(ii) Place a copy of your company's software data file on a network for use by such individuals;

(iii) install the Software on a sixth computer only if required to host your company's software data file and enable multi-user access by only such individuals to your company's software data file, and

(iv) Make up to four (4) additional copies of the printed materials accompanying the Software, if any, and/ or print up to five (5) copies of any online user documentation located in the Software for use by such individuals. Registration of the Software with Intuit after the approximate amount of time specified in the Software or in the materials accompanying the Software, and in accordance with Intuit's then-current privacy policies is required

Please keep in mind that this is Intuit's License Agreement. Other software vendors may have their own unique EULA. When inquiring about or purchasing software; be sure to ask the vendor what their licensing policy is.

Until next time.

"Danny"

© 2004-2005 Intuit Developer Network Advisory Council (IDNAC). All rights reserved.
This article is strictly for informational/educational purposes and is not intended to be an endorsement.

Intuit and the Intuit logo are used with permission.
Visit us on the web at www.idnac.org